“ One time when I was in Sonora you and Joe were talking about starting the drinking early and I thought you guys were together at one house. Told you to hang tight I was going to come pick you up and we were going to kick it at Joe's house for the night. I logged off and jumped in the shower for like 10 min. When I got out I had about 10 missed calls from you and Nelson. You kept asking if I was serious and I sure as shit was! Drove my happy ass to your house, loaded up your big ole TV into my tiny little car and off we went. Then we had to stop and get gas. Well ended up giving this random guy a ride across town for some goodies! You were trippin out the whole time haha. Turned out OK though. Then we got to Joe's and aw man we had a fantastic time! Just XBox and Drinks! And that terrible military food Joe had blech! Near the end of the night I'm down praising the porcelain god and all I hear is "Shit guys where's John we can't find John we gotta go wake up Joe John is missing!" next thing you hear is Joe yelling "Did you check the bathroom!?". Hahaha you guys stumbled in like " Dude you ok?" Great times! The drive home was shit but that night I will always remember. It's gonna be weird not being called John Smith when I get online anymore. Don't forget I'm still the whitest Indian with the whitest boy name you know! I never would have met Joe and Nelson and Devin and the gang without meeting you. You were the one who invited me into the group and I can't tell you how much I'm going to miss you man. I'm overjoyed to have known you for the years that I did. You will be greatly missed.

“ Though I only knew Chris for such a short time, I knew some of the most deep things that he could tell another person. I thought of him as my best friend, my life partner, and the love of my life. We bonded over life experiences that both of us understood and we became closer every second. I knew I was in love with him before I even met him and I proudly call(ed) myself his girlfriend. I love you Christopher Michael Jacobson. You made me the happiest I've ever been in my whole life. I'm still wondering how to do this without you...
